Instructions

Diamantes are seven-line poems that make a diamond-shaped pattern and shift in meaning from top to bottom. Follow these directions:

- 1. First, write down a noun as a subject. (At this point you may wish to skip to line seven and write down the opposite of this noun.)
- 2. On the second line, write two adjectives describing the subject.
- 3. On the third line write three participles (verbs ending in -ing) that describe the subject.
- 4. On the fourth line, write down four nouns related to the subject. (The second two nouns should be contrasting or suggest a change from that of the first two.)
- 5. On the fifth line write three participles (verbs ending in -ing) indicating and continuing the change made in line four.
- 6. On the sixth line write two adjectives carrying on the idea of change or development.
- 7. On the seventh line, write a noun that is the opposite of the subject from line one.
