Who Said That?

Match each quote to the name of the person who said it.

1. “Arizona’s greatness lies in the sum total of its geography and its peoples and their efforts from prehistoric times to come to terms with a land that makes no concessions to human beings.”
   - Barry Goldwater, U.S. Senator

2. “Fort Yuma is probably the hottest place on earth. The thermometer stays at one hundred and twenty in the shade there all the time - except when it varies and goes higher.”
   - Rex Allen Jr., country music singer

3. “If the feds aren’t going to do their job, well, then, I’m up to suing the feds to make them do their job! I mean, they sued Arizona, you know, we can sue them back!”
   - Lawrence Clark Powell, librarian and author

4. “I love you, Arizona; your mountains, deserts and streams; the rise of Dos Cabezas and the outlaws I see in my dreams; I love you Arizona, Superstitions and all; the warmth you give at sunrise; your sunsets put music in us all.”
   - John Wesley Powell, Colorado River explorer

5. “We have serious enemies and growing threats around the world. Fortunately, we have an administration whose idea of a rogue state is Arizona.”
   - Mark Twain, author and humorist

6. “You cannot see the Grand Canyon in one view, as if it were a changeless spectacle from which a curtain might be lifted, but to see it you have to toil from month to month through its labyrinths.”
   - Edward Abbey, environmental advocate

7. “What ideal, immutable Platonic cloud could equal the beauty and perfection of any ordinary everyday cloud floating over, say, Tuba City, Arizona, on a hot day in June?”
   - Mitt Romney, governor of Massachusetts and presidential candidate

8. “This land of Arizona has had an exciting history, so dramatic and inspiring that it needs no exaggeration or fictional embellishment.”
   - Jan Brewer, governor of Arizona
